Arkansas' Tree System

The Star has received a communication from the Arkansas Forestry Commission which should be of interest to every citizen who believes in the conservation of natural resources, one of the greatest of which is our timberland. The commission's letter follows:

Heydrich, Nazi Gestapo Head Rumored Dead

New York.—(P)—The British radio said late Friday that reports had circulated in Bern, Switzerland that Reinhard Heydrich had died in Prague but these are not confirmed. CBS recorded the broadcast.

London.—(P)—A Czech government spokesman announced Friday that word reached London that hundreds of Czech officials, university presidents and students had been arrested in the past 24 hours and questioned about the attempted assassination of Reinhard Heydrich, high German Gestapo official.

Heydrich, Nazi protector for Bohemia and Moravia, was wounded two days ago in an attempt on his life and has undergone an operation in which there bullets which injured his spine and spinal cord were removed.

Exchange telegraph in dispatches from Zurich said a German specialist was rushed to Prague and carried out the operations.

Lumber Order Hurts Farmers

Farmers planning to purchase lumber suitable for most farm construction during the next 60 days will have to depend on stocks now in the hands of lumber dealers, E. N. Martindale, chairman of the Hempstead County USDA War Board, said Friday.

"The War Production Board has issued an order freezing all sales and delivery of mill stocks of softwood construction lumber for that period, except lumber to meet needs of the Army, Navy and Marine Commission," Mr. Martindale said.

The War Board chairman pointed out, however, that under certain conditions lumber producers may obtain authorization from the Division of Industry Operations of the War Production Board to deliver construction lumber to retailers.

"In regard to farm storage it is essential that farmers obtain materials wherever possible now for building farm storage. It is important to repair all buildings which can be put to use this year for holding grain and to consider using empty space of any kind," Mr. Martindale said.

British Forces Halt Axis in Libyan Desert

By the Associated Press

British desert fighters heavily supported by American-built Kittyhawks and Boston bombers threw back German panzer columns Friday after they knifed 50 miles inside the British defense system in North Africa.

Front line dispatches said violent tank battles raged in a 50-mile-wide belt between Sidi Rezegh and Ain El Gazala.

A British communique acknowledged that Axis forces had driven within 15 miles of Tobruk as German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel flung massive tank forces into the struggle and hacked at Tobruk's immediate defenses at many points.

The British declared, however, that no fixed British land positions were captured yet in the 3-day-old battle.

Free French troops fighting with the British were credited with destroying 35 Italian tanks in a single engagement.

American-made tanks manned by British were said to be inflicting heavy losses on Axis armored forces attempting to knock out Tobruk as a prelude to a drive into Egypt.

An RAF communique indicated that British warplanes had already won preliminary superiority in the air declaring that Axis air activity was on a reduced scale while RAF planes constantly roared over the battlefield.

A single formation of American-built Kittyhawks was credited with destroying more than 65 Axis supply trucks while American-built Boston bombers showered explosives among concentration of 700 trucks.

British headquarters reported that British defenders of Tobruk, key citadel on the short of the Mediterranean, smashed at least two Axis forces and now were engaging the enemy forces in the vicinity of Knightsbridge, 12 miles south of Acroma which is 10 miles west of Tobruk.

China Position Believed Better

Chungking.—(P)—(Saturday, May 30)—The Chekiang province cities of Kihwa and Lanchin were still in Chinese hands at 8 p. m. Friday night after heavy and bloody fighting around both cities in heavy raids Thursday, Chinese dispatches announced.

The Central News agency reported the defenders of the two cities were offering strong resistance. They also said a Japanese unit driving southward from Lungyu, 25 miles west of Kihwa toward Anpingkai was encircled and annihilated.

The Chinese command reported Thursday night that more than 10 points have been recaptured on the outskirts of Ichang, Japanese held Yangtze river stronghold above Hankow in concerted attack which started three days earlier.

Many officers of the U. S. Marine Corps are commissioned directly from the United States Naval Academy.

Allies Destroy 4 Japanese Planes Near Australia

D. H. Lipscomb Succumbs Here

David H. Lipscomb, 75, a resident of Hope for 38 years, died at his home here late Thursday night.

Born in Tennessee, Mr. Lipscomb came to Arkansas many years ago settling at Gurdon. He later moved to Hope where he was connected with the Hope Brick Works until about three years ago.

Funeral services will be held at the First Baptist church sometime Sunday. Burial will be in Rose Hill cemetery.

He is survived by his widow, and four children, J. C. Lipscomb of Oklahoma City, Mrs. Jack Clark of Hope, Mrs. R. D. Haynes of Monahans, Texas, Mrs. Allen Garrison of Ogdin, Ark., and three grandchildren.

Germans Claim Reds Repulsed

BERLIN.—(P)—The German high command reported Friday that Soviet forces had attacked on the central sector of the Russian front—presumably before Moscow—and had been repulsed in a fierce fight with some of the attacking force encircled.

In the long contested Kharkov sector the communique said the Germans were mopping up with the number of prisoners and booty mounting steadily.

Military circles said the Kharkov battle had ended, and that fighting was continuing only in the areas south of the city against remnants of Soviet forces.

Axis Subs Are Engaged by U.S.

St. Lucia, British West Indies.—(P)—U. S. planes engaged a pack of Axis submarines a mile off port Castries late Thursday while the U. S. Destroyer "Blakeley" damaged by a torpedo 3 days earlier limped the 20 miles from Vichy French island of Martinique to St. Lucia.

Hundreds ashore watched the attack. The watchers said at least one submarine must have been sunk judging from the large quantity of oil which floated to the surface after 15 minutes bombing and depth charge attack by the U. S. planes.

No official announcement of the sinking was made.

Salvage Meet Here Tuesday

The State Salvage Committee has called a meeting of District Three salvage committees at the Hempstead county courthouse for 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, June 2.

Wallace Cowan, executive secretary of the state committee, made the announcement Friday through A. A. Albright, chairman of the Hempstead county committee.

All members of the county committee and others interested in salvaging scrap metal and other items are urged to attend the district meeting for this and other counties included in District Three.

The state committee also announced:

"Information is received from Washington this morning instructing all retailers to hold their collapsible tubes until they have as much as five pounds or more; then they may be shipped collect to the wholesaler who will be reimbursed for the freight charges by the Tin Salvage Institute at Hillside, N. J."

"Where possible it is advisable to have the wholesaler's representative take the tubes along with him when he calls, regardless of the amount on hand."

RAF Planes Hit Four Axis Ships

London.—(P)—British bombers were reported officially to have fired four Axis ships in a convoy off the Dutch coast in widespread night operations and relays of RAF planes swept across the strait of Dover to northern France Friday.

The air ministry said several other ships probably were damaged.

Two German fighters were reported destroyed in the sweep over France at a loss of one British fighter.

Carrigan Gives Arrest Rules

"A police officer may arrest on sight a suspect fleeing from a felony, but if the crime was only a misdemeanor the officer must either have personally seen it committed or else be armed with a warrant for the suspect's arrest," Steve Carrigan, Hope attorney, told the Auxiliary Police School being conducted in the City hall under the auspices of the Civilian Defense Council Thursday night.

The school ran three hours a night Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and will resume its sessions at 7:30 o'clock next Wednesday night, June 3.

Mr. Carrigan said it was vital that all auxiliary policemen understand the difference between police procedure in the more serious crimes known as felonies, such as murder, grand larceny and rape, which are punishable by death or penitentiary sentences; and the lesser crimes known as misdemeanors, such as petty larceny (stealing less than $10), disturbing the peace, drunkenness, assault and battery, and reckless driving, which are punishable by fines or jail sentences.

A policeman has a clear right to stop with force the flight of a suspect from a felony crime, Mr. Carrigan said, without any warrant. This is the old "hue and cry" common law of England, he added. But where the crime is a less serious matter the officer must either actually witness it or obtain a warrant before making an arrest.

Mr. Carrigan cautioned the police school that every officer should promptly identify himself as an officer when approaching a man to make an arrest. The attorney recalled the case of Henry Starr, notorious bandit of the Oklahoma badlands. Federal Judge Parker of Fort Smith had sent a United States marshal to arrest Starr for horse-stealing. The undisputed testimony was that the marshal drew a gun and fired at Starr without first calling out to him that he (the marshal) was an officer of the law. Although Judge Parker had Starr arrested for murder and convicted him in the federal district court at Fort Smith Starr subsequently was set free by the appellate court on the grounds that the arresting marshal had not properly identified himself as an officer of the law—and that therefore Starr was justified in firing in self-defense.

Mr. Carrigan went on to say also that policemen must bear in mind that every private home is safe against entry except where the officer is armed with a warrant. "A man's home is his castle," Mr.

Hope Resident Dies Friday

Miss Jennie Levins, 68, a resident of Hope for many years, died in Little Rock early Friday morning. She had lived in Hope almost all her life.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete but the body will be returned to Hope for burial.

She is survived by a brother, Robert Levins of Washington and two sisters, Mrs. G. W. Wiggins and Mrs. L. B. Orr, both of Hope.

Brazil Credited With Sinking 2 Axis Subs

Rio de Janeiro.—(P)—Brazil's armed forces were credited unofficially Friday with destruction of two Axis submarines and the capture of another submarine in a shoot-on-sight defense against maritime raids which the government sponsored newspaper and others in the nation termed "organized piracy."

And Then He Found Out!
Wide World Features
Nashville, Tenn. — Umpire Red
Jones and Umpire John Parks look a bit alike to Southern League baseball fans—and apparently a lot alike to slugging Les Fleming, Cleveland first-baseman who last season was slamming out hit for the Nashville Vols.
He walloped a long one in a game with Memphis, slicing the ball over left field fence.
"Honest," recalls Jones, "it was foul by this far (indicating with outstretched arms) but Fleming thought it was fair and charged around to where I was standing at third. He started pawing the ground and raising Cain."
"So I tell him—'Now, Les, you are the fellow these folks came out here to see. You're the big hero of the league and they want to see you hit some more...'
They didn't pay to see me umpire,
and I don't want to throw you out...
Just go back up there to the plate...
the ball was foul."
"About a week later my partner and I moved into Nashville for a series. Fleming came up to me and said: 'Red, old boy, am I glad to see you! Man, you can umpire for my money. Do you know what that...'
Parks did to me the other night at Memphis? He robbed me of a home run that went out of the park at least 10 feet fair. I never saw such a robber in all my life. It's good to get somebody around here who can see!"

THE PLOT THICKENS

CHAPTER XVI

"YOU are William Talcott?"

"Yes."

"You are the manager at Abas Island?"

"I was. I have been relieved and am on my way back to New York."

"But you were in charge when the launch left the island?"

"Yes."

"How long was Sebastian in your employ?"

"Five years. He came to us from San Juan to operate the distillation apparatus. I made him foreman three years ago."

"Did he have any enemies that you know about?"

"No."

"Can you tell us where he got that stab wound in his arm?"

"Yes. The night before last a smuggler named Jackson attempted to land on Abas and we attempted to stop him."

"Jackson?" The chief of police became apoplectic. "Is he mixed up in this?"

"I don't know."

The chief appraised the group with a sour eye. "Which of you is Miss Paterson?"

She stepped forward. Smartly attired, she was, in a suit of gabardine, a flaming blue bonnet confining her ash blond hair. Cool and self-possessed, with not the slightest tremor betraying her emotion.

"You were one of the guests on Abas Island and a passenger on the launch. You arrived at two o'clock this morning. After clearing customs, where did you go?"

"Miss Swenson and I went to the home of my friends near Estate Cantante."

"Were you a witness to the attempted landing of the self-styled 'Captain Jackson' on Abas Island?"

"Yes."

"Would you say that the results were successful?"

"No. After one of the crew struck Mr. MacDowell, Mr. Halsey grabbed a pistol and forced them to return to the schooner."

THE chief scowled. "Mr. Halsey, I understand you and Professor Constantine spent the remainder of the night at the Grand. Did you go there directly after clearing customs?"

"Yes."

"Did you at any time during the night or this morning see any of Jackson's crew in Charlotte Amalie?"

"I can't say that I did. Things happened rather fast down there, you know. I doubt if I would recognize anyone outside of Jackson himself."

"Would you say that Jackson had sufficient desire to get even by killing this man?"

"It would be possible, yes."

The chief quelled an uprising in his liver. "We have every reason to believe that Jackson was here last night. He left his calling card, a dozen natives smuggled in from Tortola. It is just possible also that he despatched a man to take care of the unfinished business of Abas Island. As I understand it, you are all passengers on the Blue Petrel. I see nothing to prevent your departure."

So it was over. Jackson's name had done it. Guilty or not, his reputation was enough. If they ever catch him, Talcott thought grimly, they'll hang him to the Postoffice flagpole before they start their investigation.

But it couldn't have been Jackson or any of his men who had murdered Sebastian. If it was revenge they wanted, they would have taken it on him or Halsey. And after unloading his freight, Jackson wasn't one to stick around. No. Of one thing only was Bill Talcott positive: the murder was directly connected with his frameup and the intrigue on Abas Island.

June Paterson came to him as they were leaving. Her hand rested on his arm, and softly she said, "I'm sorry, Bill. You were very fond of him, weren't you?"

He didn't answer. His eyes, hard and fathomless, were on Halsey. For he, despite his worldliness, was acting most strangely. Pulling away to walk by himself. Jumping at shadows. Scared, that was it. Did he know more than he wanted to, or was he beginning to have misgivings about his auditor friend Struthers? Whatever it was, the man was frightened to death.

TALCOTT checked out at Hotel 1829, refused one of the proprietor's famed planter's punches, and with MacDowell rode to West India wharf. MacDowell had changed; wasn't cocksure any more. He kept his thoughts silent behind a puzzled face, and once on board the Blue Petrel, disappeared in the throng of basket-laden passengers.

Talcott sought a lonely spot forward, his mind filled with fat, faithful Sebastian. The man had feared violence and death, had offended no one. Yet a covert knife-thrust had finished him while in sleep under the stars he loved. Why had he been killed?

He recalled the words of the quiet, gray-eyed man. Sinister, suggesting a web reaching out across the blocked European Continent to envelop Abas in its coils. Intrigue for the control of a tiny, smelly speck in Anegada Passage. Not for nitrates alone. Something bigger. Some enterprise that could be carried on under the guise of a legitimate American business. Right under the guns of the destroyers at Saint Thomas. Right under the nose of Old Man Winkler.

Why had Sebastian been killed? Were the plotters prepared to remove everyone of authority so that their work could be carried on unhindered? It didn't make sense. Surely Struthers must know that as soon as Bill Talcott reached New York all hell would break loose. The frameup would dissolve in thin air. But was it so simple as that? Had Struthers purposely played up the obvious would go undetected until too late?

Halsey had the auditor's report. Perhaps in that report Talcott would find what he was fighting. Those carefully worded pages must contain more than a charge of shortage and payroll padding. For now sudden, violent death was in the cards; murder had become a part of the band.

Talcott's eyes turned from the long concrete wharf. In five days he would be in New York. What awaited him there he could not fathom. He'd been sure of himself when Struthers, he thought, was playing a lone dangerous game. Now—

"Have you seen Halsey?"

"Oh?" He turned, startled, to confront Professor Constantine. So deep in thought had he been he hadn't heard the odd little man's approach. "Oh, Halsey? Can't say that I have."

The Professor clutched tighter to a voluminous book and transferred a bottle of pills to his left hand. "I thought he was right behind me. He complained of a headache so I secured this aspirin—Likable chap, isn't he? Pure Nordic. Very reliable—I do hope he doesn't miss the boat."

Auxiliary to Sell Poppies

"Wearing a poppy is a pledge that we will not break faith with those who have died defending America," said Mrs. Linus Walker president of the Leslie Huddleston Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary, as the unit prepared for the annual observance of Poppy Day next Saturday.

"The poppy comes to us from the fields of France where Americans first gave their lives in battle against the dictator powers," continued Mrs. Walker. "We wear this little red flower in honor of the men who fell at Belleau Woods, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, the Meuse-Argonne and other battles of the first World War. We wear it also in honor of the brave boys of Pearl Harbor, Wake, the Philippines, the East Indies and all those who have sacrificed life elsewhere in this renewal of the conflict."

"The poppy, as you know, was inspired by the poem, 'In Flanders Fields' with its immortal lines: 'In Flanders' fields the poppies blow, Between the crosses, row in row. The poppies were the only flower of beauty that survived amid the desolation of the battle front in France. They formed the only floral tribute on the graves of the dead and became for the men fighting there a symbol of heroic sacrifice."

"This they remain today. The poem ends with the words: 'If we break faith with us who die, We shall not sleep, though poppies grow in Flanders' Fields.' That is their message for us today. We will wear poppies Saturday to show that we are keeping the faith."

Paper poppies, made by disabled veterans of the First World War, will be distributed throughout the city on Saturday by the women of the Auxiliary. In exchange for them the Auxiliary will receive contributions for its welfare work among the disabled, their families and the families of the dead of both wars.

Parkersburg, W. Va. — H. J. Meeks thought a log had got tangled up with his trotline in the Little Kanawha river when he started pulling in that 51-pound catfish.

When he first started pulling, the line wouldn't budge, and he went for help. He and George Crowder eagerly fell out of their boat when the mudcat's head surfaced. That head was ten inches in width—six and one-half inches in breadth—the eyes.

REA Power Case Revived

Washington —(P)—A declaration that the whole southwest was facing a power shortage was before the House Military subcommittee Friday as it resumed hearings on the question whether the REA financed transmission line had duplicated existing private power lines in Oklahoma and Arkansas and used copper needed for war service.

Thomas Fitzhugh attorney for the Ark-La electric cooperative, REA subsidiary which is building the line, told the committee Thursday that the southwest was facing a shortage of power.

Fitzhugh denied that the REA financed line from the Grand River Dam in Oklahoma to a new Arkansas duplicated existing facilities aluminum plant at Lake Catherine, Ark.

The committee report had said private utilities were equipped to supply the necessary power.

Chairman Faddis, (D-Penn.) said that subcommittee wanted to reopen the question whether the construction of the line had involved any waste of copper.

Lesson Sunday School

Text: Mark 15:33, 34; Luke 23:33-46

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

The tragic story of the death of Jesus on the Cross is the theme of our lesson, with particular emphasis upon the words of Christ from the Cross.

The scene on Calvary followed quickly the agony of Jesus in the garden of Gethsemane. We are wont to say that there is an agony of soul that is greater than any physical pain, but this is not quite true, for physical pain means agony of soul as well. A martyr may bear his sufferings, upheld by his faith and determination to let nothing induce him to renounce his fidelity to right and truth. But while man lives and is conscious, the body cannot be separated from the spirit, and bodily pain, no matter how courageously it is endured, often means agony of spirit.

It is in the light of this that we must interpret the cry of Jesus, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Here, as in the agony in the garden of Gethsemane, is emphasized the deep and real humanity of the Christ who suffered on the Cross. It was the human cry that Job in another way had uttered when, under the burden of his afflictions, he had been tempted to curse God and die.

It was a momentary cry of intense anguish, but the spirit of Jesus under suffering was manifested more truly in His attitude toward the penitent thief. He knew in the moments following His outcry that God had not forsaken Him, for He said to the thief, "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise," and as the sun's light faded and darkness came over the land, and the veil of the temple rent in twain, in the same spirit in which He had prayed in Gethsemane, "Not my will, but thine be done," He cried, "Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit." This was the final word from the Cross.

But a significant part of the scene is contained in the passage in John 19:28-30, which it is suggested should be compared with the verses in our lesson from Mark and Luke. Here is a scene that mothers will understand, for we are told that there stood by the Cross the mother of Jesus. The woman who had cherished her babe in Bethlehem; and who had kept and pondered in her heart all the things that suggested the great part that her son was to fulfill, followed Him all the way to the Cross, there sharing His suffering, and giving Him the help of her presence. Could mother-love have been greater? Jesus still had a thought for His mother; and even in His agony commended her to the beloved disciple John. There are mothers today in many homes in our land who cannot be present to share the agony of sons in far-off battle scenes, mortally wounded or in deep pain. May they be upheld by the Christ who died and by the spirit of the mother of Jesus who was faithful to the end!

The banquet tables held attractive arrangements of lilies and other summer flowers. Ivey streamers extended the length of the tables.

Clarence Gordon, of Prescott, district president, presided over the meeting. The welcome address was made by Mayor R. P. Hamby and the response by John P. Cox of Hope. Interesting talks were made by J. B. Ketchum of Newark, president of the state association, Irl Bright of Little Rock, who is secretary-manager and other drug representatives.

Paul Douglas of Hope was elected president of the Eleventh District, Arkansas Pharmaceutical Association and Pete Barrentine of Nashville was re-elected vice-president.

Mobilization of Manpower

By JOHN GROVER
Wide World Features Writer
Washington—Do you work in a war factory? On a farm producing vital food items? In a job necessary to wartime functioning of civilian life?

If the answer is "No," manpower mobilization means YOU, and YOU means every adult American physically able to work. President Roosevelt's recent order setting up the War Manpower Commission, headed by Paul V. McNutt, spotlights the necessity of maintaining an adequate labor supply to manufacture fighting equipment.

It marked a new, brass-tacks policy in dealing with the supply of labor for war work. The talking war is over, and every American must justify his present job or face assignment to tasks the government considers more vital to victory.

Legislation in Prospect
This is not possible under existing law, but McNutt was specifically directed "to formulate legislation" bearing on the labor supply for submission to Congress. Such legislation could have only one purpose—to bring the whole labor force under federal control for war work.

Indicative of the closer control of the labor force is the authorization for a new draft classification, the 3-B deferment for occupational reasons, and also Senate committee acceptance of the measure providing financial aid to dependents of men in service which would mean wiping out deferment for dependency.

McNutt has made haste slowly. In many ways his task is the most complex and colossal of any in the "war cabinet." It's equal to Production Boss Donald Nelson's job with the added difficulty that it deals with human beings instead of materials.

Here are some of the main outlines of his problem:
1—There are about 8,500,000 workers in war production now, and the number must be stepped up to 17,500,000 by 1943.
2—The normal reservoirs of labor are drying up; there are only about 3,000,000 unemployed, mostly unskilled; the military will have 4,000,000 men ordinarily available for production in uniform by year's end.
3—Civilian life must be maintained as close to normal as possible, because home front morale is vital.
4—The emergency labor force—housewives without children, students, non-essential workers—is almost entirely unskilled. They must be trained or production techniques must be devised to utilize semi-skilled workers.
5—Priorities for labor must be evolved and are quite as important as material priorities. The competition between industries and between industry and the military in the field of manpower, even the contest between the army and navy for "cream of the crop" recruits, must be settled.
6—Placement of plants where labor is available, and transport of labor to areas where the supply of labor is critically short, also may come to pass.

Ten Million Required
Officials point out that war industries must have 10,000,000 new workers by 1943 to keep munitions rolling on schedule. There are 5,500,000 persons in war industries now. They'll need 17,500,000 by January, plus farm help in certain areas. Where are they coming from?

They've got to come from the labor reserves in non-essential endeavors or from non-working groups. There are 32,400,000 non-defense workers employed now. Add to that 6,500,000 housewives eligible for full-time work, 500,000 students, 3,000,000 unemployed, 600,000 aged and handicapped and 5,600,000 able to do part-time work. It totals 48,700,000, from which must be drawn 10,000,000 new war workers.

Only 40 Million Eligible
However, not all of the 48,700,000 can do war work. Women might fill an estimated 1,500,000 of the 10,000,000 war jobs. The students are largely ticketed for the armed forces. Part-time workers can't be used in continuous production processes—too many shift changes. Actually, the 10,000,000 must come from less than 40,000,000 eligibles.

The natural flow of labor to jobs will take up part of the slack. First to go into war industry will be industrial workers from priority-closed non-essential factories. The natural drift of workers in clerical, sales and service lines to higher-paid war production will fill more jobs. They'll be unable after training. Housewives can take possibly half the 1,500,000 jobs open to women, with girl workers from non-essential lines taking the rest.

May Not Require Law
After that, the pinch comes. Consensus of estimates is that between 2,500,000 and 3,500,000 workers will be needed from the rest of the labor reserve.

The Manpower Commission hopes that further voluntary transfer of workers from non-essential to vital production will fill those jobs adequately, without need for legal compulsion. If legislation comes, it's expected to follow lines similar to military selective service.

Those in non-essential lines chosen for industrial service will go into training schools or training programs within industry to learn war trades. Their places in vacated non-essential sales, service and clerical lines will be filled by part-time workers and housewives.

Training Is Problem
The training program is one of the most important features of manpower mobilization. The bulk of the labor reserve is unskilled. A white-collar worker can't go on a production line. There are two solutions: (1) expansion of the training program already under way; (2) devising production techniques to utilize semi-skilled workers after short training periods.

The War Manpower Commission also will have final authority over drafting men from farms. McNutt has indicated that deferment by industry is not unlikely, to prevent dislocation of such

"Navy Takes Care of Its Own"

For more than 100 years—120 to be exact—the officers and men of the United States Navy have maintained one of the most efficient relief organizations over to have been established in this country. Working quietly without fanfare, it has been seldom heard of by the public. But every man in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard knows it as his "anchor to windward." Officially, it is the Navy Relief Society.

The Navy Relief Society has always been supported by contributions of the men and officers from their salaries and has these aims: no widow, orphaned children, no mother or other member of the Navy man's family shall suffer hardship if it can be prevented. Stated chairman, has inaugurated a campaign to raise $5,000,000 to assure the men in naval service that the emergencies in their families will be met promptly and fully.
